Washington, DC – On October 4, 2011, Congressman Steve Rothman (D-NJ) was thanked by South Korean business leaders for the Congressman’s support of the U.S. - South Korea Free Trade Agreement and a strong relationship between America and South Korea.

“The Korea Free Trade Agreement is important for the U.S. economy, and the right move for our two nations. Trade and investment between the U.S. and South Korea support tens of thousands of American jobs across the agricultural, manufacturing, and services sectors,” said Congressman Rothman. “South Korea is one of our nation’s most important partners in fighting for regional and global security. Implementing the Korea Free Trade Agreement will strengthen that strategic relationship – from our economic and diplomatic partnership to our military and intelligence cooperation – by deepening the links between our two countries. Together, the U.S. and South Korea will continue to work together to promote our shared goals and values.”
