Washington, DC – On February 14, 2012, students from the New Jersey Public Interest Research Group (NJPIRG) chapter at Rutgers University thanked Congressman Steve Rothman (NJ-9) in his Washington, DC office for his leadership in advocating for the closing of tax loopholes for corporations. They discussed the need for members of Congress to join Congressman Rothman in the fight and took a photo with a one billion dollar check to symbolize the amount of taxes that corporations avoided through the use of oversea tax havens. NJPIRG is a consumer advocacy group that works on issues concerning health and safety, financial security, and fairness throughout society.
