Washington, DC &ndash; On April 17, 2012, Alexis Granell came to Congressman Steve Rothman's (NJ-9) Washington, DC office to thank him for his support of life saving international health and poverty programs that the ONE Campaign advocates for. Alexis Granell is a representative of the ONE Campaign and is a student at Seton Hall University. She is also a North Arlington resident and daughter of North Arlington Councilman Albert Granell.

As a member of the House Appropriations State and Foreign Operations Subcommittee, which allocates all US foreign aid, Congressman Rothman has championed funding for programs to end the worldwide AIDS epidemic along with other preventable diseases that have a devastating impact in the world's poorest countries. In addition, Congressman Rothman has been a strong supporter of President Obama's Feed the Future initiative and other agriculture support programs that provide immediate support to those around the world living in hunger and fear of starvation.
