Conducts Video Teleconference with Fifth Grade Students Who Ask About
His Views on Education, Environment, Iraq, and Other Current Events

Washington, DC - Congressman Steve Rothman (D-Fair Lawn) today paid a high-tech visit to the fifth grade class at Fair Lawn's Warren Point Elementary School via a video teleconference from Washington, DC. Rothman told the students about what it is like to work in Congress and fielded questions from them on a wide array of topics, including education, the environment, and the war in Iraq.

"I was delighted to have the opportunity to speak via video teleconference with the fifth graders at Warren Point Elementary School about being their Congressman and to address their concerns about the issues facing our state and country," Rothman said. "It is always great to talk with students. It is especially fulfilling for me when I can engage them in current events and get them to start thinking about the positive impact they can individually and collectively have on their community, state, nation, and world."

Congressman Rothman encourages teachers and principals from the 37 municipalities in Bergen, Hudson, and Passaic Counties that he represents to contact his office to schedule a time for him to visit in person or via teleconference with students.
