Undergraduate from Cresskill, New Jersey Meets with Congressman Rothman

(Washington, DC)— On Tuesday, October 2, 2007, Congressman Steve Rothman (D-Fair Lawn) discussed the legislative process with 22 undergraduate college students from across the country. The group, which included Jennifer Sinisi of Cresskill, NJ, was in town as part of American University's Washington Semester Program. The program brings undergraduate students to the nation's capital to study government through first-hand experience and contact with political, business, and community leaders. Sinisi (pictured front-row, center) is a junior at Connecticut College.
